“The Law Between Us”

Jessica Buffalo is a Cree woman living in Vancouver, BC. She graduated from SFU with a bachelor’s degree in political science and will study law at UBC in the fall. She is passionate about Aboriginal issues and voices this as an Aboriginal programmer at CJSF.

Gunargie O’Sullivan is an Aboriginal programmer. She has created radio programs focusing on Indigenous issues at both CJSF and Co-op Radio in Vancouver. Currently she is working on the Truth and Reconciliation project through NCRA.

The Law Between Us was made possible by a grant from the Radio fund of Canada. Aboriginal issues are not on many Canadians radars, and the issues that are present are only covered vaguely in schools and mainstream media. This documentary was meant to bring more attention to issues such as post-colonialism, Stephen Harper’s apology, the missing and murdered women of Vancouver’s Downtown Eastside, and the flaws in Canada’s justice system. Through research, interviews, and personal narrative, the Law Between Us touches on important Aboriginal issues that will remain important for years to come.
